THE VINEYARD OF MARCUS BUCK Esq. NEAR FRONT ROYAL, VA.-A correspondent of the Richmond Enquirer gives the following account of Grape Culture by Marcus Buck, esq., near Front Royal:

Mr. Buck has eighteen or twenty acres in vines, and is now putting in eight or ten acres to soil and exposure—a light rich soil, with a southern or southeastern exposure being pre-ferred, while a steep hill-side is especially desirable, although Mr. B. has several orchards which have a corcheastern exposure from which he expects as good results as from those looking to the South.

and coulter, the ground is then checked off, say four by six or six by eight feet, as may be most desirable, depending in great measure on the nature and and character of the ground. The remaining labor of cultivation is very small, being simply the keeping of the ground clean, pruning the vines, and gathering the fruit. One hand can tend, from five to seven acres with ease, or say from 6,000 to 9,000 vines; making an expense of say $12 to $20 per acre per annum for cultivation. An acre of Catawba vines will yield the third year from 400 to 500 gallons of wine, worth in its unmanipulated state, $3 per gallon; a product of from $1,200 to $1,500 per acre. In the hands of an experienced manipulator this wine, prepared as "sparkling Catawba," &c., and nicely bottled and labeled would bring much more. Two hundred and fifty gallons per acre is an ordinary yield the second year.

light barn-yard manure, swamp muck, &c .-the profitable cultivation of the grape than the Western or Northern States. The rot three weeks earlier than in the New York an order by W. L. CLARK & Co., Chemists, vineyards. Mr. B. has beretofore cultivated the "Catawba" principally, but is now actively engaged in planting the "Concord" and the "Joes," varieties which he deems superior to all others and destined to supercede them.

Mr. B. preserves his grapes, as winter apples are kept, plump and sound until March. Mr. B. has also extensive peach orchards, from which he gathered last year several thousand of the person you are to marry, and by the aid bushels. The success of Mr. Buck has induced many others to imitate his example, and there is every reason to suppose that ere many years, the wine crop of Virginia shall be one of the most important of her varied produc-

old. He is the son of John Bright, of Green bank, near Kochdale, from whom, with two spinning, carried on under the firm of John Bright & Brothers. He first distinguished himself in political life by his efforts against the corn laws as far back as 1836, heading the anti-corn league in 1838, making speeches at the provincial gatherings of farmers and at public assemblies, and dealing with facts and figures in a way that cold well on the country. In April, 1843, when thirty-two years old, he unsuccessfully contested the representation of the city of Durham, for which he stood again in July of the same year, and was elected .-Since then, with the exception of some eighteen months, representing, at various times, Durham, Manchester, and Birmingham, he has been in the House of Commons. He made his maiden speech in Parliament, on the motion for extending the principles of free trade, in 1843, and, strangely enough, in the same year he spoke earnestly against the slave trade-suppression bill as calculated to inflict a serious injury on the commerce of the country connected with the regions to which the bill applied.

Mr. Bright is the most effective speaker in Parliament. With a Mirabeau head, set square upon herculean shoulders; a burly figure, sturdy bearing, and forcible but never violent action; a good voice, distinct enunciation, and ready choice of language, he is nearer the American standard of forensic eloquence than probably any other man in England. Besides, he is really the only good speaker in the Commons who is free from that mannerism-that drawl and hesitation-so offensive to good taste in every other part of the world. Since the death of Richard Cobden he is unquestionably the most powerful supporter of all measures for the rights of the people and the most staunch advocate of the reform of administrative abuses, of any public man in England; and though his hard-hitting assertions of his views are sometimes dealt forth somewhat indiscreetly, he has nevertheless made steady progress towards the end he has had in view for twenty odd years.

In private life Mr. Bright is irreproachable. He is a member of the Society of Friends and a frequent speaker in their meetings. Though ranking among the second or third class only of Manchester houses, his firm does a prosperous business, and he himself is possessed of a competent estate. After the death of his first wife, in 1841, he married in 1847 the daughter of Mr. Leatham, of Wakefield, by whom he had several children. - Nat. Int.

LYING IN BED.—It is often a question among people who are acquainted with the snatomy and physiology of man, whether lying with the head exalted or level with the body is most wholesome. Most, consulting their own ease on this point, argue in fovor of
